Philadelphia Fund Alliance and Stradley Ronon Honored by Philadelphia Business Journal's 2023 Faces of Philanthropy

PHILADELPHIA – Stradley Ronon is pleased to announce that the firm has been recognized by Philadelphia Business Journal as a 2023 Faces of Philanthropy honoree alongside the Philadelphia Fund Alliance (PFA) for their longstanding charitable partnership, which supports numerous causes in the Philadelphia area. The Faces of Philanthropy awards recognize businesses that continuously seek to improve the community in which they live and work through their nonprofit partnerships.

“Stradley Ronon has a known history in the Philadelphia philanthropic community, and since 2016, with the help of many of our annual partners and sponsors, we have proudly raised over a half-million dollars for Greater Philadelphia charities through the PFA,” said Bruce G. Leto, PFA steering committee member and co-chair of Stradley Ronon’s investment management group. “We are honored to be recognized as a Faces of Philanthropy 2023 honoree, and we look forward to continuing our philanthropic efforts with PFA that benefit local charities in our region.”

PFA was founded in 2016 with a mission to benefit charities in the Greater Philadelphia area while also celebrating the region’s deep roots in the registered funds, asset management and alternative assets industries. Since its formation, PFA has raised over $590,000 for Greater Philadelphia area charities. Last year, the event raised $125,000 for Commonwealth Youthchoirs, a nonprofit organization headquartered in Germantown that transforms the lives of young people through the power of music.
